English is fun and interesting and more. The earliest English book I have is the in 3rd grade in Hunsburger. I was doing these workbook lessons and writing in cursive. In 4th grade I remember learning about brain pop, combining sentences, compound sentences, and reading books and also writing paragraphs on whatever we wanted. In 5th grade my memory goes blank there but I remember is 200m. In 6th grade we learned about using the right form of verbs, adjectives, pronouns, nouns, commas, periods, and sentence structure. Also more reading books. In 7th grade I learned about essay stuff, more reading books, art drawings for our essays, and more grammar work. I thought myself to read and was liking it so much. I was an excellent reader and my progress was continuing so much. When I right about reflections I feel bored, writing and wondering why do I do this. In essays when I was first introduced to it I was like "hey this is not really interesting or nice." But over time I was enjoying it so much and it was a good use of time. It also challenged me in many ways and in English class I still do it. My favorite books have got to be Rush Revere, history books, non fictions, and Star Wars. When I read books as homework for summer I learn so many interesting things, some good books and some of them are not. English is so fun and very educational. While in English I was learning about Greek gods and their past but I learned a lot. Now adjectives, pronouns, verbs, adverbs, and nouns are just confusing. While in 6th grade I was learning about these and every time I hit one of these I would go insane. I didn't know what to do and

What do you like to write about?

I like to write about topics and books lost it! Every time I was to ~~my~~ ^{my} ~~news~~ ^{news} I could understand them. Pronouns I could understand then but when it came to verbs, adjectives, and adverbs struggled with it and tried so hard to learn the hard concepts. I studied at night I got my parents help but every time I couldn't understand it. Also vocal words. At night I would study them and input them into my brain!! And most of them got in a lot of them were hard to memorize and understand I've done so many papers, books, lessons, assignments projects, partnerships, and free reading assignments that it is hard to keep track of them And I just don't remember that much of them when I learned about showing sentences was confused at first. But when looking at the material, I memorized it and used it to show vocal words and write them for homework well that is everything about English and I really enjoy it and can't wait for the rest of my school life with English

I came into the Island role play. I understood the concept really well.

always the joke kids make

In my experience when we crashed we were really panicking. In the first few minutes we were thinking about cannibalism for food. Our Adult Supervisor died and everything was chaos. I felt that we should have been more organized with our choices. Owen, Rushil, Devonte, and Ryan S left for a nearby cave. Meanwhile me and Lexie think we should get away from the group and think we will attract unwanted attention. from the group? We needed a talking stick for people to be quiet and respectful. That was a little bit of what happened.

We hope the best of us will win!

I was wanting everyone to get along and not yell at each other. We figured the desert island's wood could help us start a fire. David, Leo, and Justin offered their glasses for the fire. My mind thought that everyone was overreacting and we needed a strict plan. Except we were on a stupid island with no food, materials, or anything. Though I do think the experience had a real life situation I don't think it was good for a situation like that. I think we could have done better and if I could do everything differently I would have never let myself be a part of all of that.

In my life I experience many things, feel many things and think many things. First, in my family I have my mother Cindy, my father Toby and my brother Huxley. I have some aunts and grandparents living in the city. I like piano, music, technology, reading, jokes, legs, and spending time with friends and family. I dislike mushrooms, people who are rude, computer issues, and distractions. In my school life in classes I think about the math material and want to learn a lot and hate when there is too much talking during an assignment.

What does that mean?
People talking while you're working or people talking during a lesson?

I think about if I like this material, if I am confused or if I hate it. In lunch I either sit with some people or sit alone at lunch. When recess time comes I completely focus on basketball. After school I usually finish all my homework or if I am in a play (like right now) I will study the lines and show up to rehearsal. Outside of school I like to hang out, spend time with people, play piano, play video games, and help around the house. I don't hang out with people or talking to them, but after a while I need some me time. In school I don't like it that much, but when I make it to this school I love it and enjoy going to school every day. Except waking up that was painful. ~~My favorite thing is~~ FUN really?

That's great to hear. Is that still the case?

Me!
Fact: Did you know I love Christmas the most because that's a time when I can be inside and spend time with my family and eat really yummy food. ~~That's~~

~~My life~~ In my life my friends are mostly in school and not my neighborhood. My friends are very nice and at one point in time I ~~was~~ have and got when I came here I made lots of new friends.

is exciting!

When covid struck I thought "wow I hate the world right now?" But then after covid was gone I felt better and it felt like covid never existed besides from the occasional mask encounter. In a normal day I usually wake up, eat breakfast, brush my teeth, go to work, call my friends, eat lunch, hang with my family, watch tv, play video games, eat dinner, chill, and go to sleep. A very nice school experience is a week ago I was on the news for a good ten seconds. In school most people are like "no please I want to stay home". My point of view is "School is fun and like educational lessons and learning about new concepts." My brother AUXIER goes to the same school and we hang out at home and enjoy spending time with each other. That is everything I learned and that is my amazing life.

What a positive entry!

It's wonderful to hear
you enjoy life so much.
